A former journalist turned stay-at-home dad, Pete is an idealist who always tries to ensure the best outcome for everyone – until Miles puts his patience to the test.

Switched at birth

James Norton stars in a gripping thriller about the devastating repercussions of a hospital mix-up

NEW THRILLER
Playing Nice

Sunday & Monday, 9pm, ITV1
(box set, ITVX)

The lives of two couples are changed for ever in ITV1's four-part psychological thriller Playing Nice when they discover their children were swapped at birth.

Stay-at-home dad Pete (James Norton) and restaurateur Maddie (Niamh Algar) have a chaotic but contented life with their toddler Theo until they receive the devastating news that, owing to a hospital mix-up, Theo is the biological child of Miles (James McArdle) and Lucy (Jessica Brown Findlay), whose son David is Pete and Maddie's birth child.

Still reeling from the shock, the two couples arrange an informal meeting to decide what's best for the children's future – but not everyone is being completely honest about their motives. At first, it seems all four parents are agreed on a solution, but how far can each couple rely on the other?

'Pete's natural inclination is to see the best in Miles and Lucy, and trust that they will find a way through this horrible situation,' Norton tells TV&Satellite Week as we join the cast on set in Cornwall. 'He believes that things will be OK if you're just decent – but the truth is, Miles doesn't allow that. He takes an entitled and very aggressive approach to the situation.'

Meeting their biological children for the first time is an emotionally fraught moment for both couples, particularly for Maddie, who experienced postnatal depression after the birth of her child.

'She's very loving, but she's always felt like there's been this disconnect between her and Theo,' says Deceit star Algar. 'Obviously, when they discover that the child they've been raising isn't theirs, she begins to question who she is as a mother – was her initial disconnect with Theo a result of him not being her biological child this whole time? Does she have a stronger connection with David? It's an interesting exploration of what it means to raise a child, and if the way you nurture them affects them in any way.'

HANDS-ON APPROACH

The series, which is adapted from JP Delaney's bestselling novel, is the first TV commission for Norton's production company Rabbit Track Pictures and he's enjoyed a more substantial role behind the scenes on this project.

'It's been a challenge, in a good way,' says the Happy Valley star. 'It's a different type of creative nourishment. It's less showy and more sitting in rooms tapping away at a laptop, but I've found it so exciting.'

Playing Nice also sees Algar reunited with Malpractice creator Grace Ofori-Attah, who adapted the novel for the screen. One of the major changes from the source material was the relocation of the setting from London to Cornwall – and the creators were keen to play up the contrasting elements of the local landscape.

'We didn't want a kind of chocolate-box version of Cornwall,' says Norton. 'We wanted to use the beautiful, and yet quite foreboding, coastline as a jumping-off point for the atmosphere of the piece. Grace came down here for a couple of research trips, and started thinking about how it would fit – like the huge, austere house that Miles has built on a cliff, and the view that he's kind of stolen from the public that no one else can see.'

Although relations between the couples on screen eventually becomes litigious, things were far more light-hearted between the four actors, who started jokingly referring to themselves as ABBA...

'Because Niamh and I are both quite fair, and Jessie and James have darker hair, we went to a Halloween party dressed as ABBA and it was very fun,' recalls Norton. 'We also have a WhatsApp group called ABBA, and any day we were all in together, we'd be blasting the group's tunes in the make-up truck!'

An autistic woman turns detective in a groundbreaking crime drama

NEW CRIME DRAMA

Patience

Wednesday & Thursday, 9pm, C4
(box set, Channel 4)

A brilliant, neurodivergent police archivist takes centre stage in groundbreaking new drama Patience when she forges an unconventional crime-fighting partnership with a seasoned detective.

Set in York, the six-part series features a number of neurodivergent actors, including Ella Maisy Purvis in the title role of Patience Evans, a young autistic woman who works in the criminal-records office.

Patience treasures the structure and routine of her job, but her world is thrown into chaos when DI Bea Metcalf spots her unique and invaluable instincts for puzzle-solving and picking apart crime scenes during an investigation into a mysterious suicide.

Recruited to Bea's squad, has Patience found her true calling as a detective, or is she in way over her head?

'Patience has a fantastic ability to recognise patterns. Criminology and forensics are her special interests,' Purvis, 21, tells TV&Satellite Week during a break in filming in York. 'She can see and solve things in different ways, so when she notices something in Bea's case, she pushes her in the right direction and they end up becoming a team.

'But Patience has created a life for herself that's very safe, so she's pushed out of her comfort zone. I think a lot of autistic women grow up being pulled, pushed and bent into shape to fit a mould that slots as best it can into the rest of society.'

'Patience's journey allows her to come into her own, and to do what she needs and wants rather than being terrified to speak up for herself.'

AUTHENTIC CASTING

Adapted from French crime drama Astrid et Raphaëlle, the series also stars Adrian Rawlins as Patience's godfather,

Douglas, Mark Benton

as Bea's boss, DCI

Calvin Baxter, and

Nathan Welsh as

DS Jake Hunter.

But casting

neurodivergent

actors was a priority for the writing team, headed up by Hotel Portofino creator Matt Baker.

'The drama has been authentically cast, and I loved being able to bring a lot of myself to the character,' says Purvis. 'However, the show isn't saying, "This is what autism looks like, full stop." It's more, "This is one woman's experience of the world, have a watch."

Filmed in both York and Belgium, the series features perplexing cases including a drowning in a museum with no water and a 'corpse' that walks away from a mortuary slab.

'I've done so many crime dramas, but I thought the crimes were really interesting in this show, and almost Agatha Christie-ish,' says Laura Fraser, 49, who plays Bea. 'I wanted to do this because I wanted to work with autistic people, and the authentic casting makes it fresh and different.'

'Bea is also going through her own journey as her 11-year-old son possibly has ADHD or is autistic, but she's in denial about it. She finds being a detective easier than being a mother, but as she becomes closer with Patience and softens into acceptance, she develops more of an understanding of her son.'

'I think the series will increase understanding and compassion for anyone watching, too. It shows that there's nothing wrong [with neurodivergence] – it's just a different way of thinking.'

Deadly harbour

Joanne Froggatt and John Bradley star in a Sydney-set murder mystery

NEW DRAMA

North Shore

Saturday, 9.30pm, ITV1 (box set from Sunday 29 December, ITVX)

Games of Thrones actor John Bradley didn't need asking twice when he was offered the role of a detective in ITV1's gripping new murder mystery, North Shore.

'It felt like the part I'd been waiting for – it ticked so many boxes,' says Bradley, 36, who plays DS Max Drummond, a British investigator called in to solve the murder of a UK politician's daughter in Sydney.

The Manchester-born actor, who has also appeared in sci-fi series 3 Body Problem and disaster movie Moonfall, adds: 'I've done a lot of things that are heightened, whether they're a medieval fantasy series or in space, but I'd never really done anything that felt grounded in the world you see out of your window.'

SUSPICIOUS DEATH

Created by Cold Feet's Mike Bullen, the six-parter also stars Downton Abbey's Joanne Froggatt as UK politician Abigail Crawford, who's in the middle of negotiating a trade deal between Britain and Australia when she hears her daughter's body has been washed up in Sydney Harbour.

'It's a gripping story,' explains Froggatt, 44, who's also starred in BBC1 drama Sherwood. 'I was fascinated by the character of Abigail and how she behaves.'

Max is forced to team up with Australian detective Meg Driscoll (Kirsty Sturgess) to investigate the crime, and receives a less-than-warm welcome from the Sydney cop, until the pair gradually develop a mutual respect as they work together to seek justice.

POSITIVE SPIN

Bradley says he enjoyed playing mild-mannered Max as a regular, nice guy who's good at solving crimes – far removed from the troubled cops that feature in so many other detective dramas.

'It's become a bit of a cliché now that a cop has to be brooding and serious. Crime shows have been hijacked by brow-furrowing, haunted detectives,' he smiles.

'But Max is a different kind of personality, and that feels quite fresh to play. He sees the funny side of things and is hopefully charming – I think he's as valid a representation of a murder detective as anyone else.'

NEW DRAMA

The Good Ship Murder

Friday, 9pm, Channel 5

Anchors away for more murder, mystery and romance on The Good Ship Murder's luxury cruise liner as Channel 5's hit crime caper sets sail for a second series this week.

The new seven-episode run begins with the ship docking in Italy, where former detective turned cabaret singer Jack Grayling (Shayne Ward) and First Officer Kate Woods (Catherine Tyldesley) enjoy the sights of Rome while navigating their fledgling romance. But, unfortunately, the Eternal City proves to be the final stop for one of their passengers, opera singer Alessandro Bartoli (Greg Canestrari).

Oliver and Jessica go to the football credit following the 2008 financial crash. This time, in the follow-up to the original Netflix movie, Dave takes on the UK's payday lenders, who loan people money before trapping them in debt with eye-watering interest rates.

'It was wonderful to see how people responded to the first film,' says Kinnear. 'They really seemed to love it, so it's great to be back.'

PAYDAY PAYBACK

The new tale is set two years later, when Dave hears about a woman whose life has been torn apart by a £200 payday loan that has ballooned to a debt of £1,480 in the space of a year.

Incensed by the situation, Dave tells his wife (Jo Hartley) that he wants to tackle an industry that's accused of preying upon vulnerable people. He's not the only one who's outraged. Having battled payday firms in the US for many years, American journalist Jessica (Chrissy Metz) travels to Lancashire to join Dave's fight for justice.

After writing countless articles about payday lenders, Jessica is an expert on their devious ways, but while most of the firms' US outlets have been shut down, she's surprised to hear they're still allowed to operate in the UK.

One of the worst is run by shady American businessmen Carlo Mancini (Catastrophe's Rob Delaney) and when Jessica arrives in Burnley, she joins forces with Dave and Oliver (Happy Valley's Amit Shah), an accountant who volunteers at Citizens Advice, to bring down the predatory company.

'It's a feel-good story about people helping other people,' explains Metz. 'It was great to come over to the UK and film in Burnley and have people call me "Chriss-eh", which I love!'

The film also features a cameo from the real-life Fishwick, who became a millionaire from a van and minibus business, and whose Burnley Savings and Loans company has now lent more than £34 million to thousands of people and businesses across the UK, with all profits donated to charity.

'I play a baddie, one of Carlo Mancini's henchmen,' reveals Fishwick. 'It's great fun to be back, putting Burnley on the map again. Loan sharks prey on the poor and the vulnerable, and they really need shutting down.'

Mia (Millie Kent) makes a surprise visit

As Jack and Kate try to catch the killer, Jack must also deal with a surprise visit from his teen daughter Mia (Millie Kent).

'What's great about this series is that people from Jack's past come into his present,' says Ward, 40. 'As well as his daughter making an entrance, we also have people he arrested many years ago coming on to the ship.'

Former Hollyoaks favourite Ross Adams will join the show as new cruise director Colin, while guest stars on the voyage include Mark McGann, Dinnerladies' Duncan Preston and ex-Brookside actor Sue Jenkins – who all joined the regular cast for filming aboard a real working cruise ship.

'This series feels like a different show, super-polished in every way,' says Tyldesley, 41. 'Filming flowed so much better because everybody knew what they were doing and we all knew our characters inside out. The way it's been shot looks incredible – they've done an amazing job.'

NEW CRIME DRAMA
Silent Witness
Monday & Tuesday, 9pm, BBC1

It's all change at The Lyell Centre when colleagues Nikki Alexander (Emilia Fox) and Jack Hodgson (David Caves), who are now engaged to be married, find themselves with a new boss.

As Silent Witness returns with 10 new episodes made up of five stories, beginning with a two-parter about vulnerable pensioners, outspoken Harriet Maven (former EastEnders star Maggie Steed) comes out of retirement to head up the forensic-pathology centre, while crime analyst Kit Brooks (Worzel Gummidge's Francesca Mills) also joins the unit.

We caught up with Fox, 50, to hear about the latest developments...

Jack and Nikki got engaged in the last series. What's happening now? Throughout this series, Jack's working out what would be a good wedding for them, while Nikki is a little bit in denial. There's this next stage of commitment, and what that means at this point in their lives.

What do you make of the tension between their work and personal lives? They are scientists, so they work on factual evidence. And yet emotions, love and the heart are things that you can't really explain. So I have found that fascinating.

With marriage on the cards, how high are the stakes for them? It's such a leap of faith, falling in love, and it's a high risk, committing to someone you have been friends with for so long. Jack's lost his dad, while Nikki has no family around her, so there's a great vulnerability.

How do new recruits Harriet and Kit affect the dynamic? Everything changes within the Lyell team. There's a lovely dynamic seeing how Jack deals with all that oestrogen! And having these different generations of women together is great. The relationship between Jack and Kit is sparky from the very beginning, as they're trying to work out who's going to be leading whom.

And how is it for Nikki having a female boss? There is something about Nikki and Harriet that just connects, and you can feel the respect they have for each other.

Which of the new episodes stood out for you? There's a very moving case in which we are basically putting a body back together as a whole. We were getting guidance from a pathologist about what this actually means – giving someone back their physical form and identity with respect.

NEW ERA

The departure of Grantchester's trusty vicar in next week's episode will pave the way for the arrival of former Hollyoaks actor Rishi Nair, who will play newcomer Reverend Alphy Kotteram. But Green says that his old co-star will be sorely missed...

'Tom's final scene is a beautiful tribute to the incredible journey Will and Geordie have been on,' explains Green, 60. 'The laughter Tom and I shared on set as Will and Geordie was extraordinary, so saying goodbye was always going to be hard – but we'll remain the best of mates.'

'I always love coming back to Grantchester and I love this new era with Rishi. The quality of the drama and writing is as high as ever.'

Rival factions battle for supremacy in an epic western

NETFLIX American Primeval

NEW Available: Thu 9 January
Genre: Western Season: 1 Eps: 6

The untamed wilderness of the American frontier provides a stunning and brutal backdrop to Netflix's new western series penned by Mark L. Smith, who co-wrote hit 2016 movie The Revenant.

Six-part saga American Primeval opens in the Utah Territory in 1857, where a host of different cultures and communities are locked in a deadly battle to gain control of valuable land.

Among them is plucky pioneer Sara Rowell (Betty Gilpin) and her son Devin, who arrive at the outpost of Fort Bridger, run by grizzled Sara hopes to continue her journey west to search for her husband. However, when her guide is murdered, she's forced to join up with a Mormon wagon train, led by Jacob Pratt (Dane DeHaan).

DANGEROUS JOURNEY

'Sara wants to protect her son at all costs, especially after she slips into this apocalyptic, high-stakes environment,' explains Gilpin, 38. 'They are thrust into a world where it's all about survival. There are no rules.'

Jacob and his companions are aiming to reach a Mormon stronghold that is being built in what will become Salt Lake City. It's a journey that brings them into conflict with the US Army and indigenous tribes, and the first episode depicts a real-life bloodbath, the Mountain Meadows Massacre, when Mormons, led by Brigham Young (Kim Coates), murder hundreds of pioneers.

Luckily for Sara and Devin, they are rescued by Isaac (Taylor Kitsch), a frontiersman with ties to the Shoshone tribe, who reluctantly agrees to help them.

'Violence was a huge part of the world at this time. There was so much conflict that there was no way to tell a story without it,' says Smith. 'The show really gives us a view into the Mormon migration. We wanted to show the lengths that Brigham Young went to defend his religion – and also the threats against the Mormons during that time.'

The series was filmed in New Mexico, and, before filming, the cast had a month of cowboy camp, where they learnt how to ride horses in 3ft-high snow. Even so, Kitsch broke his foot by the second episode.

'We filmed in the mountains in extreme cold, with wolves, bears and snakes,' says director Peter Berg, 60. 'Probably the hardest part was working with the wolves because if you get too close to them, they attack you. Getting them to attack our stuntmen was probably the single most difficult bit of directing I had to do!'

David Schwimmer and a group of teens battle supernatural forces

Goosebumps: The Vanishing

NEW Available: Friday 10 January
Genre: Horror Season: 2 Episodes: 8

Disney+ releases a new instalment of its scary Goosebumps horror anthology this week, based on the bestselling young-adult novels by R.L. Stine.

This time, Friends star David Schwimmer takes the lead role as divorced botanist Anthony, who confronts a terrible event from his past when he returns to his family home in Brooklyn.

The spine-chilling eight-part series co-stars Ugly Betty's Ana Ortiz as local detective Jen, who has a personal connection to the case, and also features a 'found footage' episode, filmed on a hand-held camera by director of 1999's The Blair Witch Project, Eduardo Sánchez.

Here, Schwimmer, 58, tells us more...

How would you describe your character?

Anthony is the divorced dad of two teenage twins, Cece and Devin, and the family comes to spend the summer in the Brooklyn house where Anthony grew up as he needs to take care of his mom, who's living with dementia. It is a challenging chapter in Anthony's life, but he is determined to make it a fun summer for the kids.

Where do the scares come from? For a dare, the twins go off with some friends from the neighbourhood and explore a very creepy old abandoned fort. It's the site of a terrible event that happened 30 years ago, when four teenagers disappeared there – one of whom was Anthony's brother. He hasn't been seen since and is presumed dead, but whether that is actually the case is something we find out in the series.

What attracted you to the role?

I was excited because I'm a major fan of horror comedy and I've never had the opportunity to do this genre before. There are a lot of stunts, action and visual effects. I also felt connected to Anthony. I am a single dad, too, and I could relate to the challenges he faces. Goosebumps is such a cherished series, and in every episode, there are lots of little Easter eggs and references from the other books for the superfans to spot and figure out.

'I'm so excited that we're going to be on Netflix,' WWE star Piper Niven, from Kilbirnie in Scotland, tells TV&Satellite Week. 'I feel like the UK really deserves this, because we've always had the raw end of the deal. It was difficult to see wrestling here, and now the UK gets everything.'

On Call

NEW

Available: Thu 9 January Genre: Crime drama Season: 1 Episodes: 8

An ambitious rookie and a veteran cop patrol a tough California neighbourhood while attempting to get the measure of each other in gritty new police procedural On Call.

Each episode follows Long Beach PD newcomer Alex Diaz (The Good Doctor's Brandon Larracuenta) and his training officer Traci Harmon (Pretty Little Liars star Troian Bellisario) as they work together on a shift, never knowing what incendiary situation the next call will throw them into.

'There's no shortage of drama in being a police officer in current times,' says showrunner

Tim Walsh, who co-created the series with Elliot Wolf. 'It's an incredibly challenging job in a very challenging environment.'

Is soon becomes clear that Alex's time in the police academy hasn't fully prepared him, and when he hears rumours about Traci within the department, he begins to wonder if there's a side to her that he hasn't seen.

'There are moments where Alex feels he can trust Traci, but then another character plants a little seed of doubt in his mind,' says Larracuenta, 30. 'What makes the show so interesting is that in each and every episode, he has to work for her trust, and vice versa.'

To create a more informal, documentary-style feeling to the show, the series interweaves footage from the dashcam in the cops' car and the body cameras that they are wearing on their uniforms – which the actors shot for themselves.

'They'd strap GoPros on us and we'd shoot a scene from top to finish, which was super-fun,' says Bellisario, 39.

The creators believe the show's pioneering visuals will make it stand out from other cop shows, and they have high hopes for the series' future.

'We're very proud of the fact that we have no formula,' says Walsh. 'I don't think we'll ever run out of ideas for this series.'

The Tavistock Square attack

A moving docuseries looks back at the 2005 suicide attacks on London

NEW FACTUAL

7/7: The London Bombings

Sunday & Monday, 9pm, BBC2 (box set, BBC iPlayer)

On 7 July 2005, three explosions on the London Underground and another on a bus in Tavistock Square claimed the lives of 52 people and injured hundreds more.

Now, almost 20 years on, BBC2's powerful four-part documentary 7/7: The London Bombings explores events through the eyes of those affected by the horrific terror attacks, from the emergency services to the then Prime Minister Tony Blair, as well as the police and security forces who subsequently carried out the biggest manhunt in British history.

Also sharing their memories are survivors and the bereaved, including Julie Nicholson, whose daughter Jenny, 24, was heading to work at a music publishing company when she was killed in the blast near Edgware Road Tube station.

'Twenty years doesn't feel any different to one year, except we've had more time to get used to grief,' says Nicholson. 'Jenny had a wonderful sense of humour, a zest for life. She was at the start of her career and, like many caught in acts of terrorism, was unlucky to be in the wrong place at the wrong time.'

AFTERMATH

Nicholson, who was a priest in Bristol in 2005, was first alerted to the atrocity when she received a call from her younger daughter Lizzie.

'I was visiting family in Wales and we didn't have the radio or TV on but Lizzie asked if I'd heard from Jenny. Then it was like falling dominoes when we tried to phone Jenny and also discovered she hadn't turned up in the office,' she explains.

'We had five excruciating days of not knowing. When we finally had the news, I was advised not to see Jenny but I wanted to be with her. Because I'm a priest, I anointed her body. That wasn't religious. It was about capturing that closeness between mother and child, a moment of birth, a moment of death.'

The documentary also looks at how, as the Islamist terrorists' identities were uncovered, another failed attack on London's transport network took place on 21 July. The following day, at Stockwell station, police mistakenly shot dead Brazilian Jean Charles de Menezes, whom they wrongly suspected of being involved. And Nicholson recalls following every development.

'I had a need to know everything,' she says. 'People were trying to keep the nation safe. Survivors were reclaiming lives. Those who lost a loved one were grieving. My anger will never go away that we live in a world where innocent lives are lost. And my daughter's part of that.'

Dart Kings

Saturday, 9pm, Sky Documentaries & Sky Showcase (box set, Sky Box Sets & NOW)

In the 1970s and 80s, dartsmania swept the UK as what was once just a working man's pub game began commanding TV audiences of over 10 million, and turning players like Eric Bristow, Bobby George and Jocky Wilson into household names.

As a three-part documentary takes a look back at the sport's heyday, we caught up with George, 79, to hear his memories...

Do you look back at those days fondly? Yes, we had a lot of fun and we were all mates, more or less. I liked to be the showman, I liked the theatre of it. I had to play well but I enjoyed the dressing up.

How did you become known as the 'King of Bling'? When I played Eric Bristow in the World Championship final in 1980, I had a glittery shirt on and someone gave me a candelabra, so I walked on stage with it and everyone got their lighters out! Then I had a cloak made and

Jocky Wilson with George

I got more and more jewellery. They called me 'Mr Glitter' at first, then it became the 'King of Bling'.

Eric Bristow had a reputation for being cocky. Was that fair? Yes, he was really cocky! He was a great player but he was a Jekyll-and-Hyde figure. He'd be great in the morning and he'd make you a cup of tea. But by the evening, when we were playing, he was arrogant.

How do you think darts has changed over the years? It's not as much fun. Today, all the players are wrapped up in cotton wool. They can't go out in the audience and they can't have a beer.

Do you think the future of darts is safe in the hands of Luke Littler? Yes, he's an amazing darts player. Luke Humphries is, too. Darts is exploding. It's really a worldwide game now.

HORROR COMEDY

Friday, 10pm & 3.15am,
Sky Premiere

Take the culty vibes from Midsommer and The Wicker Man, stir in a dollop of dark comedy from the likes of Hot Fuzz and Sightseers and you come up with the bloody delight that is Get Away. Written by Nick Frost (who starred alongside Simon Pegg in Hot Fuzz, Shaun of the Dead and The World's End), this sees his amiable, confrontational-hating English dad, with wife Aisling Bea and teen kids Sebastian Croft and Maisie Ayres, travelling to an isolated island in Sweden to witness a bizarre festival held there.

Naturally, the locals, led by a wild-eyed Anitta Suikkari, are not best pleased to have outsiders around, but Frost and his brood are welcomed more by Eero Milonoff, the decidedly creepy, Norman Bates-esque owner of their Airbnb. It's obvious from the get-go that things are not what they seem, but there are surprises in store for everybody...

What appears to be a fairly slow start to the movie suddenly comes into sharp focus once the soundtrack kicks in with Iron Maiden's Run to the Hills and the carnage ensues. Frost and co pitch their performances just right (even if the Swedish section of the cast have far less to play with), gleefully taking on the tropes and mannerisms of the English abroad to cringingly full effect. Director Steffen Haars keeps things moving and delivers a brisk pitch-black comedy that is wildly entertaining and increasingly funny as the story reveals itself. 2024, 15, 86MIN

Spanning 30 years of Elvis Presley's life, from his boyhood formative early encounters with gospel and rhythm & blues to the stage in Las Vegas, Baz Luhrmann's biopic has swagger to spare and a star-making performance from Austin Butler. Breakout star Butler imbues Presley with heartbreaking vulnerability as the singer's early exuberance and enthusiasm gives way to tragedy. Interestingly, the story is told not by Presley, but by Tom Hanks' Colonel Tom Parker who managed Elvis for much of his career and whose exploitative, carnival-barker-style approach to handling the star stifled his talent. Much of interest is skipped over by well-edited montages or newspaper headlines, but Luhrmann cultivates such vibrant energy that it's easy to forgive the gaps. 2022, 12, 159MIN

Almost as soon as he's laid a foot in New Zealand, lay preacher Thomas Munro (Guy Pearce) intervenes in the execution of young Maori woman Rangimai (Tioreore Ngatai-Melbourne) by a local warlord (Lawrence Makoare), and takes her in as his ward. This is the 1830s, when Maori clans fought each other while the English colonists moved in by stealth, and director Lee Tamahori highlights an indigenous nation unaware of what is going on right in front of them. It's not long before the blatant racism of 'polite' society steers Munro towards the Maori, as he attempts to broker peace between two tribes after some bone-crunching, blood-soaked clashes. With a stunning New Zealand as its backdrop, this is a visually sumptuous movie, driven by strong acting and a propulsive story, with a title that changes meaning as the film progresses. 2024, 15, 119MIN

A coming-of-age movie from film-maker Kevin Smith (Clerks, Zack and Miri Make a Porno, etc), this slight, but amiable semi-autobiographical tale follows 17-year-old Austin Jatur and his friends attempting to watch movies all day at the local cinema in 1986. Some of the banter is on the nose, and Smith struggles with female characters, but this is made with affection and heart. The cast (which includes numerous cameos from Smith regulars) is good, although the stand-out is Ken Jeong as the cinema's megalomaniacal manager. 2024, 15, 84MIN

Staz Nair as Harry Virdee

Virdee

Staz Nair stars in a gritty Bradford-set crime thriller

FIRST LOOK

Harry (right) with Riaz (Vikash Bhai)

DS Amin and DS Conway

BBC1's upcoming crime drama

Virdee explores the personal and professional challenges faced by a British-Asian detective.

The six-part Bradford-set thriller is adapted by AA Dhand from his own novels and sees Staz Nair play determined cop Harry Virdee, who has become distanced from his Sikh family after marrying Muslim woman Saima (Aysha Kala). But he is keen to build bridges with his relatives for the sake of his young son Aaron.

However, Harry's life spirals out of control when he finds himself dealing with a manipulative killer who has the Asian community in their sights. Amid gangland rivalries, Harry must try to bring peace to the city, but he is forced to liaise with his drug-baron brother-in-law Riaz (Vikash Bhai), which could bring further danger and turmoil.

COMPLEX STORY

Kulvinder Ghir and Sudha Bhuchar play Harry's parents, Ranjit and Jyoti, Manjinder Virk is his sister, Mandip, Nina Singh is Tara, his crime-reporter niece, DS Clare Conway, and Danyal Ismail is his new partner, DS Amin.

'It's an honour to be taking on this vibrant and complex story about assimilating culture and what we're willing to do to protect who and what we love,' says Nair. 'This show leads with vulnerability more than any detective drama I've ever seen, and it's a privilege to be bringing AA Dhand's hope for his city to life.'

WHAT'S NEXT FOR...

Paapa Essiedu

BBC1 drama Babies, penned by Mum's Stefan Golaszewski, sees the actor team up with Siobhán Cullen to play a couple coping with the heartache of pregnancy loss. Jack Bannon and Charlotte Riley co-star.

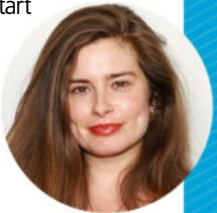

Richard Gadd

The actor will star in BBC1 drama Half Man, which examines the troubled bond between two men from the 80s to the present day, taking in their teenage years, a devastating row and a shocking reunion.

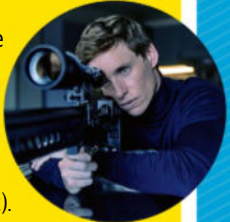

Rachel Shenton

In Channel 5's thriller The Rumour, the actor portrays a mum who moves to a small town to start a new life, but she spots online gossip about a child killer living nearby. Joanne Whalley and Emily Atack co-star.

Coming Back

Sky Atlantic's The Day of the Jackal, inspired by Frederick Forsyth's novel, will return for a second series, which follows the fortunes of the eponymous assassin for hire, played by Eddie Redmayne (right).
